PREFACE.

IT will always be a matter of regret to philologists that the late Prince Louis-Lucien Bonaparte left his library uncatalogued. Throughout a long life the Prince devoted his best energies and talents to the formation of what he hoped would be the finest linguistic collection of works yet gathered together. Many great authorities, well qualified to give an expert opinion, are agreed in thinking that he succeeded in his ambition. He certainly had exceptional advantages for his task, advantages which it is extremely unlikely to find again united in a single individual.

His great philological enthusiasm was well seconded by his high social position and by his extraordinarily rare literary attainments. While yet a young man his fame as a linguist was worldwide, and from all quarters of the globe books poured in upon the cousin of an Emperor who was known to value a rare work above all other treasures. He became the intimate friend of all the great linguists of his day, who delighted in assisting him to the utmost of their power in the accomplishment of his noble desire. His library will be found to contain the best of their works, often enriched with their autographs. Every catalogue of importance came to his hand, so that there was not a book in the market but he knew of it. He valued money only as a means of obtaining books, being lavish in his expenditure on them in the time of his prosperity, and, sometimes actually depriving himself of the bare necessaries of life in order to secure a rare work, when the fall of the Empire had considerably circumscribed his means.

During his travels he visited every bookseller of note; he entered every shop where he saw books exposed for sale; he never left any means in his power unemployed to secure a work he fancied. A record of his travels might almost be drawn up from the entries he made in his purchases as to where and when he acquired them. In judging his library it must be remembered that his one object in book-collecting was linguistic; he valued a specimen of a South Pacific dialect, hitherto unrepresented in his library, more highly than a rare edition of the classics; and, if a new language or dialect came to his knowledge, he had no peace of mind until he had secured a specimen for himself.

Incidentally, however, he acquired works of the very greatest bibliographical interest and rarity, many of which will be sought in vain in all the published records of the bibliographers. Even, therefore, from the bibliophile's point of view the Prince's library is one of extraordinary merit and value.

His primary object was the acquisition of every language and dialect represented in Europe; but in the course of years his ambition went further, and he hoped to gather together specimens of every known language which possessed even the most rudimentary literature.

It is more than probable that he succeeded with the European portion of his scheme; a glance through the accompanying synopsis of the contents of this work will only partly show what great strides he had made towards the accomplishment of his larger task, for it, as well as the Catalogue itself, is but the merest outline of the linguistic treasures contained in his library.

It had for years been his intention to compile his own Catalogue on a scientific basis, which would have demonstrated not only the relations of languages but the lessons to be learned from the shading off into one another of their dialectal varieties. A great portion of his life had been spent in the study of dialects, and the conclusions to be drawn from the survival of an odd word or two in some of the most out-of-the-way specimens, as showing their original connection with others to which they no longer bore the slightest resemblance.

This work would have been one of the greatest philological importance, and would have proved a fitting crown to an arduous life of linguistic research.

It is more than probable that he would therein have conveyed to the world the final results of his investigations into the history of the Basque language—that linguistic mystery which has proved so great a puzzle to all the eminent philologists who have attempted its solution.

Unfortunately death ended his labours at a time when all the vast material for his work had been gathered together, and just as he was about to proceed to its execution.

The present attempt at a Catalogue is a mere makeshift, hurriedly compiled by one who lacked the necessary qualifications for the task. In view of the approaching sale of the library a Catalogue was necessary, and chance threw the work into my hands.

I have followed M. Abel Hovelacque's well-known book as the basis for the linguistic arrangement.

The books of reference used were those met with in the library, the "Brunet" being the 1842 edition.

Of course in the short time at disposal it was impossible to submit more than a very few books to anything beyond the most cursory examination. Where, however, reference has been made the results were such as to make it matter of regret that a fuller investigation could not be pursued with respect to others.

It is no exaggeration to say that in all probability some of the rarest and most valuable works in this library have escaped special notice altogether. This will scarcely appear strange when it is remembered that this Catalogue, embracing works in most of the known languages of the world, was compiled within the period of eighteen months. It would have proved a task of physical impossibility to give to each book the time and attention devoted to a few, the importance of which was patent at the first glance.

In order to save time and expense Roman type has been used throughout the work.

Occasionally a note appears to the effect that such a book is not in the British Museum. This must not be taken as conclusive, but only that I have failed to discover the work in the British Museum Catalogue. It may appear in the British Museum Catalogue under a different heading to that here adopted. Experts in the various languages of which the Bonaparte Library is composed will probably find that very many of my entries are under totally wrong headings. I can only claim their indulgence on the plea that I have done my best with a very difficult task.

A rough attempt has been made in the case of a few of the better known languages to show the wealth of dialects possessed by this library, but in no instance has this been pursued to an exhaustive point. In the greater number of languages no attempt at this treatment has been made at all.

In the compilation of a perfect Catalogue of the Bonaparte Library there is several years' work for many experts; it is therefore to be hoped that the ultimate destination of the collection will be some learned institution where its linguistic treasures may be studied at ease. That its dispersal would be little short of a disaster is the opinion of the most celebrated philologists and librarians of the day.

It remains for me to thank those gentlemen who have most willingly assisted me during the progress of the work. At the British Museum Library I received every possible assistance from the learned staff of gentlemen there employed.

Dr. Ginsburg put it in my power to make what I hope will prove a satisfactory description of the early German Bibles; Count Ferrero assisted me with the Italian works; Mr. E. Vincent Evans has supervised the passage of the Welsh portion through the Press; a scholar of eminence has given me valuable information on the works in the different Gaelic idioms, and has divided into dialects the Gaelic of Ireland; my brother, the Rev. Reginald F. Collins, helped me out of difficulties in many languages, and spent a considerable amount of time working daily in the library; Don Ressurreción Maria de Azkue, Professor of Basque in Bilbao, has divided the Basque works into broad groups; Mr. James Fitzmaurice-Kelly, author of the last English Life of Cervantes, has given me invaluable assistance with the Spanish works; Mr. Lothrop Withington, Mr. Charles O'Connell Hayes and several other gentlemen have also rendered me very important services in compiling the Catalogue.

Finally, I must mention the name of one without whose constant guidance and help it would have been impossible for me to have accomplished my task. To the Rev. William Henry Kent, the learned son of the distinguished author Mr. Charles Kent, is due whatever of merit may be found in this Catalogue outside what is attributable to the gentlemen already named.

It has been impossible for these gentlemen to undertake anything approaching responsibility for this work, so that in the very many cases where errors have occurred the blame must attach to me alone.

Of this edition only from Genesis to the end of Ruth was published. This copy contains only the Pentateuch. The edition consisted of four varieties, the last column being sometimes in French, Italian, German, or, as in this case, Slavonic. As the work is very rare it is extremely difficult to secure a specimen of each variety. The British Museum copy complete to the end of Ruth is described as a made-up copy, the 6th column being partly in French and partly in Italian and Low German.

2348 CORONA PRETIOSA. Introduttorio nuovo intitolato Corona Preciosa, per imparare, legere, scrivere, parlare, ed intendere la lingua greca volgare e literale, e la lingua latina, ed il volgare italico, etc. Compilato per lo ingenioso huomo Stephano da Sabio stampatore da libri greci e latini nella inclita Citta di Vineggia. Impressum est hoc opusculum per Joan. Antonium et fratres de Sabio. Impensis vero Domini Andreæ de Turresanis de Asula. Venetiis, 1527. 8vo, morocco. (The title is printed in Italian, Greek and Latin.)
This is a copy of the edition referred to by Brunet as appearing in the catalogue of Bishop Butler, No. 1680, where it is entered under the name of its compiler, Sabio (Stephano da). As his name does not appear on the following editions, and as the work is generally known as Corona Pretiosa, I have also catalogued this copy under that heading. I regret I have not been able to give cross entries, as this work should also undoubtedly be entered under the name of "Sabio." Brunet says that this volume belongs to the Aldine Collection, as it bears the name Turresan, yet M. Renouard does not mention it.

2349 CORONA PRETIOSA laqual insegna la lingua Greca uolgare e literale, e la lingua Latina ed il uolgar Italico con molta facilita et prestezza nuouamente emendata. Venetiis, ex Sirenis officina, apud hœredes Petri Rauani et socios, 1543. 8vo, mor.

Of this work Brunet says: Ce livre rare était chez Crevenna, où il n'a pas eu de prix; mais l'édit. de Venise, 1546, in-8, qui n'est point préférable à celle de 1543, a été vendu 49 fr. à Paris, en janvier 1829. This edition is not in the British Museum.

2350 ——— Another edition. Venetiis, per Pietro e Gio. Maria fratelli, e Cornelio nepote, di Nicolini da Sabio, 1549. 8vo, crushed levant.

It does not appear that Brunet was acquainted with this edition, but he refers to an earlier edition by the same printers, 1527, as appearing in the catalogue of Bishop Butler, No. 1680, and priced then at 19 shillings, a copy of which edition is catalogued above. This edition is not in the British Museum.

5119 FERRARI (Giovanfrancesco). Le Rime burlesche, sopra varii, et piacevoli soggetti; indrizzate à diversi nobili Signori. Venetia, 1570. 8vo, crushed levant.

This work contains 53 pieces of burlesque poetry against Aristotle, Cicero, etc., written in various Italian dialects and in slang. The author has translated into slang one of Horace's epistles. Lafontaine, says Didot, appears to have taken the fable of La Cigale et La Fourmi word for word from him. This work is described in the Catalogue of the Libri Library, seized and sold by the French Government in 1847, as: "Recueil rare et peu connu de Capitoli, qui peuvent être comparés aux meilleurs pièces que Berni et l'Aretin aient composées," etc., etc.

5120 FRAZER'S Magazine for the town and country for September and November 1854. London. Half morocco. 2 vols. (Vol. I, Nos. 297 and 299.)

These numbers contain an article called A handful of Italian Patois Books.

5131 RUZZANTE (Agnolo Beolco, detto il). Piovana, comedia, overo novella del tascho di Ruzante. Venetia, (Giovanni Bonadio), 1565. 8vo, calf.

5132 ———— Rhodiana, comedia stupenda, et ridiculosissima, piena d'argutissimi motti, in varie lingue recitata. Composta per il famosissimo Ruzzante. Venetia, (Giovanni Bonadio), 1565. 8vo, calf.

The peculiarity of Ruzzante's plays is that each character speaks in a different dialect.

5133 ———— Tre Orationi di Ruzzante, recitate in Lingua Rustica. Venezia, (Gio. Bonadio), 1565. 8vo.

5134 ———— Due Dialoghi in Lingua Rustica. Venezia, (Gio. Bonadio), 1565. 8vo.

5135 ———— Moschetta: comedia del famosissimo Ruzzante. Venezia, (Gio. Bonadio), 1565. 8vo.

5136 ———— Anconitana: comedia, etc., as above.

5137 ———— Vaccaria: comedia, etc., as above.

5138 ———— Dialogo facetissimo et ridiculosissimo di Ruzzante. Venezia, (Gio. Bonadio), 1565. 8vo.

5139 ———— La Fiorina. The title-page is wanting, but it evidently belongs to the same edition as the above.

5140 ———— Tutte le opere del famosissimo Ruzzante, di nuovo con somma diligenza rivedute, e corrette, (cioè, la Rhodiana; l'Anconitana; la Piovana; la Vaccaria; la Moschetta; la Fiorina; comedie; dialogi due, etc.). (Venet.), 1584. 12mo, vellum.

Brunet gives the place of publication as Venet., in brackets, as above; but the printer, Giorgio Greco, in his dedication of this work to S. Vespasiano Zogiano, dates from Vicenza alli 20 Settemb. 1584. Beolco was born at Padua, 1502, and died 1542. His works were published separately at first; this is the first known collected edition. He quaintly describes the grotesque manners of the villagers. Each of his characters speaks in a different dialect, Venetian, Bolognese, Paduan, etc.

5141 VALERY (M.). Voyages en Corse, à l'Ile d'Elbe, et en Sardagne. Paris, 1837. 8vo, half morocco. 2 vols.

Anno dnī 1532. Gedruckt zu Colln im iair 1532. 8vo, vellum.

This work is not in the British Museum, and is unknown to all the bibliographers I have consulted. A work with a somewhat similar title by Merlo-Hostius, but nearly a century later, is in the British Museum. It would almost appear this work suggested the later one. The plates are apparently by a pupil of Albert Dürer, as they are quite in his style, some of them being actually copies of his Little Passion.

Mr. S. J. Aldrich, of the British Museum, after considerable research, discovered that the printer was Pieter Quentel, from the border being identical with the one used in the Concordantiæ Breviores printed by P. Quentel in 1530.

Without title-page, pagination or register; in double columns, with 57 lines to the full column. Fol. 1 has an elaborate woodcut border, which is used by H. Quentell in other books, e g. Scriptum super sententias of Thomas Aquinas, 1480.

The above title and note are taken verbally from the British Museum Bible Catalogue, Pt. 1, p. 210, compiled by Mr. Martineau. He goes on to say that the British Museum copy is imperfect; wanting all after 2 Kings, i.e. after fol. 175, and also fol. 3 and 4. The present copy is perfect, containing the Old and New Testament and Revelations. The same elaborate woodcut border already mentioned reappears on fol. 1 of the New Testament and on fol. 1 of Revelations. In each case the cut at the bottom represents the three kings worshipping the infant Saviour. The title of Revelations begins: Hijr begint dye vorrede over dat boeck der hemelicker apenbaringe, and ends: Dat boeck der hemeliker apenbaringe sunt Johannes . . . ende maer mede dat gantze boeck der gotliker schrifften die Bybel: hefft hijer ein selich einde daer van gaede sy danck. loffrere ende glorie in ewycheit Amen. 1060 pp. The Song of Solomon is left untranslated in the Latin, on the ground, as the translator remarks, that it contains things young people should not know until they are old enough to read it in that tongue. Incidentally this offers very strong evidence against a commonly received opinion that the Bible was kept from the people before Luther's time. It is curious to observe that the translator incorporates his remark with the Holy Text, footnotes not having apparently come into use in his time. With regard to the dialect, given in the British Museum Catalogue as that of Cologne, it is necessary to state that the Prince had this work bound in morocco with the title Biblia Neo-Saxonica, dia. potius Hollandica, while the next work bears the title Biblia Neo-Saxonica, dia. potius Coloniensi.

Graesse remarks on this Bible: Les exempl. de cette bible, qui est beaucoup plus rare que les bibles ci-dessus décrites en dialecte haut-saxon, sont tellement différents qu'on présume avec raison qu'il en existe deux éditions. [The two editions are united in perfect copies in the Bonaparte Library, and I have not been able to find that any other Library possesses them.] Voyez sur les jolies gravures en bois Zani, Pt. 2, vol. i, p. 56, et sur le volume entier *Goeze, Historie d. gedruckten Niedersächs. The Bibliothèque Nationale possess also a perfect copy of this Bible, but are without the next. This copy is there called Liber conventus Brutensis. Bible Flamand. It is part of the plunder of the Revolution.

Fol. 4 recto:] Hijr beghynt Genesis dat erste boeck der vijff boeckers Moysi. [With notes by Nicolaus de Lyra.—With woodcuts.] [Henricus Quentell.] Colne, [1480 ?] Folio.

540 leaves, without title-page, pagination or register; printed in double columns, with 57 lines to the full column. Divided into two parts of 270 leaves each, the first containing Gen.—Neh., Tobit, Judith, Esther, Job and Psalms, and the second the remaining books. The same border appears on the first leaf of Genesis, of Proverbs, and of the Revelations. That on fol. 1 has a different cut at the bottom, representing the three kings of Cologne. The Song of Solomon is not translated but printed in Latin. This edition greatly resembles that printed at Cologne about the same time in the Cologne dialect, and has the same borders and illustrations.

Again I have availed myself of Mr. Martineau's excellent Catalogue for the above description and note; British Museum Catalogue (Bibles). Part 1, p. 210.

In the Prince's specimen the borders partly vary from those in the last work, a different block having been used for the right-hand cut.

This is the Bible which, while Mr. Martineau describes it as in the Low Saxon dialect, the Prince had bound in a morocco cover bearing the title Biblia Neo-Saxonica dia. potius Coleuensi.

9946 BIBLE. De Biblie mit vlitigher achtinghe: recht na deme latine in dudesck auerghesettet Mit vorluchtinghe unde glose: des hochghelerden Postillatoers Nicolai de lyra. Unde anderer velen hillighen doctoren [especially Hugo de Sancto Victore. With many woodcuts]. Vormiddelst Steffen arndes: lubick, 1494. Folio.

492 leaves, without pagination; printed in double columns with 66 lines to a full column. The only punctuation used is a single dot. The large initials are generally printed. The sheets are principally in eights, some being in sixes. The glosses are incorporated with the text.

This is once more Mr. Martineau's description and note in the British Museum Catalogue (Bibles), part 1, p. 210; and so far is applicable to the work in the Bonaparte Library. He proceeds: "Imperfect; wanting the third and fourth preliminary leaves, the place of which is supplied by photographic fac-similes." The Prince's copy is perfect.

Vogt in his Catalogue of rare works, Frankfurt and Leipzig edition, Stiebner, 1793, says at page 145: "Magni hodienum fiunt tum ob raritatem, tum ob glossam potissimum eam risu certe dignissimam, qua verba Genes. iii, 16, ita reddita et exposita sunt: Under der Macht des Mannes vvers tu vvesende, und he schal aver dy herschopen, dy vackene to pyneghende, und to sland. Agit de hoc Codice satis copiose Jo. Henr. von Seelen Specim. vi Selectorum Litterar, p. 211-251. [Prima quae purum idioma Saxonicum exhibet. Panzer Annal, p. 209.]"

The best and fullest account of this famous Bible is to be found in Seelen's Selecta Litteraria (referred to above), Lubeck edition, J. Nicol. Greenius, 1726, p. 211, sq., under the heading: VI. De rarissimo codice bibliorum glossatorum, lingua Saxoniæ Inferioris Lubecæ, 1494. Fol. editorum diatribe.

Yet in spite of all that may be said with regard to this work, Dr. Ginsburg, the great authority on early Bibles, maintains that it is neither half so rare nor half so valuable as the two preceding copies.

9947 ———— Biblia dudesch dat erste (ander) deel. End: Hyr endiget sick dat boek der heymeliken openbaringe . . . dar myt ock geendet wert . . . de Bibel. vor alle andere dudesche Bibelen Lutterer uñ klarer na rechtem warem dudeschem uñ sessischer sprake . . . tegē dem latinischē text gerechtuerdiget . . . mit ouerschriften by dem meysten deel der Capittel . . . und mit figurē de hystorien bedudende. 2 dl. [C. Drake:] Halberstad, 1522, fol.

Written in a purer Low Saxon dialect than the preceding Bibles of Cologne and Lubeck. The letters C. D. on the title-page and elsewhere probably represent the printer, C. Drake. Printed in double columns, without pagination, 54 lines to the full column. The initials are printed black. Deel 2 begins at the book of Proverbs. Many of the woodcuts bear the date 1520; the undated ones seem from the form of the letters to be about 50 years older. This version is generally similar to that used in the Lubeck Bible of 1494, both in the text and in the chapter-headings; but in the Psalms the latter agree with the Augsburg High-German Bible of 1473.

The above is Mr. Martineau's description, with note, of the British Museum copy. British Museum Catalogue (Bibles), part 1, pp. 210, 211. It is equally applicable to the Bonaparte specimen, which the Prince had bound in morocco.

A frontispiece cut represents the Blessed Virgin and Child with a figure of Death using a scythe below, with the inscription: Memorare novissima tua et ī eternū nō peccabis. On the back of the frontispiece is the verse: Qui sequitur me non ambulat in tenebris dicit dominus. The work is enriched with a few woodcuts; the large initials are printed in black. It consists of 232 unnumbered pages.

I have not come across the book in the works of reference at hand, but from the sumptuous manner in which it was bound by the Prince it is clear he considered it a book of great rarity.

10,003 ——— The Imitation of Christ. Begins: Dyt ís eyn kostlich devoit boeckē und is genant (Qui sequitur me) myt flyt oevergesatz uī dem latȳ in guden dutzschen. Below this title is a rough woodcut of Christ, followed by the verse Qui sequitur me in Latin and German. The register comes next, at the end of which (page 16) occurs the jingle:

13,211 JESU MARIA (J. à). Naçin za dobro umriti. (Tradutione del Libretto dell' Arte del ben morire del Padre Giovanni di Giesù e Maria Carmelitano Scalzo fatta in lingua Illirica da Pietro Gaudentio Vescovo d'Arbe.) Romae, 1719. 8vo, calf.

13,212 JURASICH (Giov.). Dizionario Italiano-Illirico. Edizione prima. Trieste, 1863. 8vo.

13,213 KACICHIU-MIOSSICHIU or KAČIĆ (Fra And.). Razgovor Ugodni Naroda Slovinskoga, etc. Dubrovniku, 1839. 4to, half calf.

The British Museum possesses four later editions, but not this.

13,214 KAČIĆ (Fra And.). Razgovor Ugodni Naroda Slovinskoga, etc. Zadru, 1851. 8vo, half morocco. 2 vols. in one. (Treatise on the Illyrian race, etc.)

This is another edition of the last work. The names of the authors are so differently spelled in the various Servo-Croatian dialects as to be scarcely recognisable. Where I have had time to identify them they have been placed together, and sometimes the varying spellings have been reduced to one.

13,215 ——— Korabljica. Pisma svetoga. Zadru, 1858. 8vo.

Scripture and other religious stories.

13,216 KADCICH (Ant.). Theologia moralis, seu, Manuductor Illyricus. Bononiae, 1728. 4to, half calf.

13,218 KATANCSICH (M. P.). Specimen philologiae et geographiae Pannoniorum in quo de origine lingua et literatura Croatorum simul de Sisciae, Andautonii, Nevioduni, Poetovionis urbium in Pannonia olim celebrium et his interiectarum via militari mansionum situ disseritur. Zagrabiae, 1797. 4to, half calf.

13,219 KATEKISAM (Veliki) u pitanjih i odgovorih za Javno i posebno Naucanje Mladezi kraljestva Hèrvatskoga. Budimu, 1845. 8vo.

13,220 KATEKIZMUS (Veliki) u pitanyih i odgovorih za obchinski i osobiti nauk dice u Slavonii. Budimu, 1815. 8vo, half calf.

13,221 KEMPIS (Thos. a). O Naslidovanju Isukersta knjige cetiri Tome iz Kempisa prevod Otca Bartula Kasica druzbe isusove. Zadru (Zara), 1854. 8vo, morocco. (The Imitation.)

13,222 KNJIŽEVNIK. Časopis za jezik i poviest hrvatsku i srbsku, i prirodne znanosti. Uredjuju i izdaju Dr. Fr. Racki, V. Jagic, J. Torbar. Zagrebu (Agram), 1864 to 1866. 1st, 2nd, and 3rd years. In parts.

13,223 KOPITAR (Barth.). Glagolita Clozianus, id est, Codicis Glagolitici inter suos facile antiquissimi, etc. Cum tabulis aeneis duabus. Vindobonae, 1836. 4to, half calf.

13,224 KOVTSCHEZITS (V. S. K.). On Servian History. Language and Customs of the Servians, under the three laws (i.e. Greek, Roman and Turkish). Vienna, 1849. 8vo. In the Cyrillian character. With frontispiece.

This work not only deals with Servia proper but also with Bosnia, Herzegovina, and other neighbouring districts. This appears to be the first part of the work. I cannot find out whether it has been finished.

13,225 KRALJEVIĆA (Fra Angeo). Razgovori duhovni s' pripravom osobitom za uprav ispoviditi se i dostojno pricestiti se sastavljeni. Rimu, 1860. 8vo.

13,231 LEDESMA (Diego). Catechism of Christian Doctrine, translated from the Italian of Fr. Diego de Ledesma, S. J., in the Cyrillian character. (Vienna?), 1583. 8vo.

This Catechism has been translated into Dutch, Polish, Breton, Canadian, etc., etc.; see De Backer and Brunet. This work is not mentioned by them, and hence it would seem to be very rare. To it is added, Catechism of Christian Doctrine, by Cardinal Bellarmine, translated into Servo-Croatian (Roman character) by Don Alessandro di Comuli. Roma, per Francesco Zanetti, 1582. 8vo, calf. The Italian note at the end says, "composta per Don A. di Comuli," but the British Museum Catalogue gives this among versions of Bellarmine, and renders the title "composed (rather translated) by A. de Comuli."

13,232 LEX STEPHANI DUSANI. Edidit Fr. Miklosich. Fasciculus prior. Textum continens. Vindobonae, 1856. 4to. In Cyrillian characters.
